Determining an Individual's Needs for Services

Virtual Coffee Break

Provided by the University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Nursing and Health Studies
Jointly Provided by the Clinical Training Center for Sexual Reproductive Health

Description:

This brief learning session is designed for providers of sexual and reproductive health (SRH) services working across a variety of clinical settings, including family planning clinics, primary care practices, hospitals, and Title X-funded sites, as well as providers who identify SRH needs and make referrals. Participants will explore how to use person-centered communication strategies to better understand a client's goals, needs, and life stage. The session covers how to determine which SRH services to offer or recommend, how to account for risk factors that may influence care, and when and how to make appropriate referrals for services outside of your organization's scope.

Outcome:

Participants will self-report increased confidence in using person-centered communication to assess client needs, determine appropriate SRH services, and make referrals beyond their site's scope.

Objectives:

Upon completion of this module, participants will be able to:

- Use person-centered communication to assess a client's needs for services.
- Determine which SRH services to offer or recommend based on client needs.
- Recognize how client goals, risk factors, and life stage influence service needs.
- Make appropriate referrals when services are beyond your site's scope.

Successful Completion:

To receive contact hours, participants must complete the activity as well as complete the online evaluation and request for credit form. CNE as well as Certificates of Completion will be emailed 4 – 6 weeks after submission of the online evaluation/request for credit form.
